

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

September 2012

First of all I would like to wish all National Association for Clean Air members (NACA), local and international associates well and hope 2012 has been good. It is with a great appreciation that I congratulate the NACA editorial committee on successful release of the NACA Journal Issue Vol.21, No 1

Our partnership with local and international academic institutions, experts in the areas of air quality management and Department of Environmental Affairs has grown strong and we are able to share knowledge and advance in the area of local air quality management through our journal. NACA has long recognised the importance of advancing and sharing scientific knowledge with our members and other key stakeholders. This journal continues to ensure that we are able to fulfil our mandate and encourage progressive discourse amongst our members. It is indeed a proud moment for the council that we are able to continue to publish a journal that will ensure that our members are informed about air quality management scientific advances.

We believe that the entire air quality scientific and management fraternity will make the best use of the journal by citing, contributing and aiding in the exchange of scientific knowledge.

I wholeheartedly congratulate the editor and his editorial team for their exceptional work in bringing out this wonderful journal edition. I am sure our journal will contribute tremendously to the enhancement of scientific knowledge in our country and the rest of the academic world.

NACA President

Abel Sakhau
